When King was a child blacks and whites were separated in much of the U.S: they could not go to the same school or eat in the same restaurants. He tried to make changes with nonviolent methods.

He was the leader of various peaceful marches and of the 'Montgomery Bus Boycott' in 1955. In his famous speech 'I Have a Dream', Luther King talked about the importance of racial equality and asked for the end of discrimination. In 1964 King got the Nobel Prize.

Martin L. King died in 1968. He was assassinated in Memphis, USA. After his death he got the Presidential Medal of Freedom in 1977 and the Congressional Gold Medal in 2004.
